

DEAR MISS DASH . . .

Continued

to make them the holidays I had measles. But it will have to be a shop cake. I had a bash at cake-making and produced a sort of balloon that subsided into a pancake when I took it out of the oven. Aunt Elspeth said it was too much baking powder. I remember thinking four tablespoons a bit too much. No hard-boiled eggs, I promise you.

Does it entice you? I hope so. Look here, do come. You can apologise all over again and I'll forgive you and we'll go on from there. One small matter: I'd rather you didn't bring Aunt Muriel. You know how my herbaceous border affects her.

Yours hopefully,
Michael.

Flat 6,
September 23rd

Dear Michael,

How kind of you; I'd love to come. Would next Saturday be all right? I think it is awfully clever of you to make scones—mine always go soggy in the middle. Don't bother to buy a cake; I'll bring some shortbread. I'm quite good at making it. I think even Aunt Elspeth would approve.

Yours,
Rebecca.

September 25th

Dear Rebecca,

How absolutely marvellous! I hope the sun shines on Saturday, so you can see the bracken and the bits of the beech trees which are a sort of dull rose-colour. If it rains, I shall show you how to make scones. You know, shortbread is my favourite. Shall we swap recipes?

I'll meet you at the bus stop with the car—yellow, about the same age as Aunt Elspeth, but still going strong. Shall I wear a few fronds of bracken, or will you be able to pick out a nondescript male with potato-coloured hair and large feet? I have rather nice grey eyes—or so I have been told!

Hurry up, Saturday! As ever,
Michael.

Flat 6,
September 26th

Dear Michael,

This is just to say I'll be looking out for the feet and grey eyes. You will have to look for a green coat. By the way, Aunt Muriel says my eyes are quite unnaturally green.

See you Saturday,
Rebecca.

September 28th

You know, I thought the herbaceous border was the loveliest thing in my garden until I saw you there, Becky. I simply had to write and tell you how much I enjoyed yesterday afternoon. I knew you at once—although you didn't tell me you were so incredibly beautiful! God bless Aunt Muriel and her egg shells! If it hadn't been for her we might never have met. You must tell me when her birthday is and I'll send her a present of a picnic hamper.

When can I see you again? Look here, what about a spot of supper and a film afterwards? Do you like French or Chinese cooking?

Please come—and make it soon.
Mike.
